6) Software, Office and Computer Sites and Downloads Worth Mentioning

Free Productivity Utilities from gljakal.com

The following are four totally free utility programs offered by gljakal.com.

gljakal's To Do

Gljakal's to do is a simple yet powerful program that helps you keep track of the things you have to do. This little program has lots of features that can be used with great profit in a matter of minutes.

Clock! v2

This is a simple, beautiful and useful clock for your desktop. It remembers your appointments, has an option to display on top of all windows, has the ability to change the background picture, and is configurable to four pre-defined sizes.

FontViewer

Simply choose the drive and directory where your downloaded font files are located. They will appear on the right, with their file names. Then preview a selected font in the bottom window, and if you like it, press the "install" button to install it.

File Partitioner

Break a large file into a set of smaller files. It can be useful if you have to send a big file via email and the destination account has a limited space in MB.

7) Question of the Month about Software Training:

Each month Scott Turton will answer a current or important question that we have received about computer and software training.

March 2006 Question of the Month:

Could you please list some good tutorial and article resources for learning Microsoft Office Automation and VBA scripting?

Answer:

The Microsoft Office products (Word, Excel, PowerPoint, Access, Outlook) provide servers that you can use to manipulate Office documents from Visual Basic or Visual Basic for Applications (VBA) code. For example, you could write a Visual Basic program that opens Excel, initializes a series of cells, and uses the cells to display a chart. For another example, you could write a VBA macro in PowerPoint that opens a Word document and copies its headings into PowerPoint slides.

Here are the best learning resources I have found for learning Office Automation technologies:

This is a search on msdn.microsoft.com for "Office Automation" containing results that links to many good tutorials and articles covering this technology.

Microsoft Office and OLE Automation Documentation Links

This page contains useful links to information regarding Office and OLE Automation. Most of the links here are to articles on msdn.microsoft.com.

Automating MS-Office Applications

This tutorial helps you to automate PowerPoint, with hints to automate other MS-Office applications

Creating an Excel Spreadsheet and Adding Data to It Programmatically

Tutorial: Microsoft Office Automation

VB.Net Office Automation FAQ

I hope this helps you.
